

A dashboard cannot tell you which rooms will be full.

Songcry is a music discovery platform where geography is the sort order. A song starts in its artist's city, and the people who play it carry it to theirs.

● PORTLAND ——— ● BOSTON ——— ● PHILADELPHIA ——— ● NASHVILLE

Distribution got solved. Discovery never did.

Anyone can put a song everywhere in an afternoon. That used to be the hard part, and it stopped being hard. What nobody fixed is the part after.

Being heard by someone who was not already looking now costs one of three things:

ONE Paying to get on a playlist.

TWO Feeding an algorithm built around your past.

THREE Waiting on somebody's shortlist.

You have the numbers. You do not have the map.

A streaming dashboard hands you a count. It will not tell you which city fills a room, who played the record twice this week, or where the next tour should actually go.

Songcry is built the other way round. A song lives in a place, and it moves when a real person carries it somewhere new. For an act that plays real rooms in real cities, that is the same shape as the career.

Their product is built around your past. Ours is built around your city.

Geography is the sort order.

Every other platform sorts by popularity you already have. Songcry sorts by where a song is. It starts in its artist's city, in front of the people close enough to show up.

Free to join

No fee to be on it, and no tier that buys placement.

A person reviews every application

A quality control decision, not a judgment of the artist.

Artists keep their rights

We take a licence to play the song. Nothing else. We are not a label.

Spotify solved listening. Nobody solved discovery.

A song travels because a person carries it.

01

You upload the full song, and your signup opens your city.

Artist video paired with studio quality audio. How it shows up in the feed is your call, the whole track or a cut of it. The full version always lives on your profile.

02

The people near you hear it.

Anyone, anywhere can also pull up any city and listen. It starts near you. It does not stay there.

03

Someone hosts it, and it starts playing in their city.

Hosting is the signature act: a listener puts their name on your song and joins the chain that carries it. That is what moves it.

What it actually gives you today.

A hearing on the work

A person reviews the application. Not a follower count, not a budget, not a relationship you already have.

Listeners attached to real places

Not a number in a dashboard. A song lands in named cities, and every play since day one is counted toward the map we are building.

Nothing to sign

No exclusivity, no term, no share of anything. Be on every other platform the same day and leave whenever you want.

A direct line to the people building it

We are small enough that a founding artist changes what gets built. That stops being true later.

No budget, no follower threshold, no algorithm to game. A person decides, and a person moves you.

The restraint is the product.

NEVER Ads in the music feed.

NEVER Paying to be heard. Ranking is not for sale.

NEVER Fake plays. They are silently thrown away.

NEVER Exclusivity. Be everywhere else on the same day.

ALWAYS A person reviews every application.

ALWAYS The artist keeps what they walked in with.

A chart is a mirror. We are an engine.

You should hear this from us, not find it in the app.

LIVE TODAY

iPhone app, on the App Store

Artists uploading and publishing

Full song feed, city carousel, filters

Like, dislike, host, comment, share

NOT YET. BEING BUILT

Fans are waitlisted. There is no crowd waiting

Android

Artist analytics: a map, not just a number

Guaranteed first listens for every upload

We are deliberately small right now. Density before scale.

The place your music, your fans and your data all live.

None of this is live yet. It is what we are building, and it is the reason the geography matters in the first place.

Tours and venues

Knowing where a song actually landed is how you route a tour and how you make the case to a room.

Insight you can act on

A map, not just a number. Every play since day one is already counted for it.

Reach your fans as groups, or one at a time

Built on who actually listened and who hosted you, not on a follower count.

Talk to them on the app

Messaging and push, so you reach the people who listen instead of renting access to them somewhere else.

Right now it is a feed. It is being built into a home base.

We hand-pick founding artists from the signups whose work makes the case. It is a partnership.

Not a tier you qualify into, and not a reward for being early. We go looking, and we choose on the work.

If that is a conversation worth having, it starts the same way everything else here does. With the music.

The questions your lawyer would ask.

Do we give anything up?

No. A licence to play the song in the app. No ownership, no exclusivity, no term you cannot leave.

Covers, samples, cleared elements?

Original recordings only. If a record has a sample or a cleared element, ask us before you upload and we will put the answer in writing.

Can a signed artist upload?

That comes down to who controls the masters, which is your call to make. We ask you to confirm nothing blocks you, the same warranty every platform you have uploaded to asks for.

What does it pay?

Nothing, and we would rather say it first. Songcry is promotion, not distribution. The same bucket as a radio spin or a support slot.

What about publishing?

Yours. We take no share and we do not administer it. If your own agreement requires you to notify a publisher or a PRO, that stays with you.

Do you need our ISRCs?

Not required. Bring them if you have them and we will keep your catalogue tied to you properly.

One of us lived the problem. The other can build the machine that fixes it.

FOUNDER

Jack

A decade as an independent artist. Six figures of his own money spent on promotion that went nowhere. He self funds Songcry out of the business he built.

FOUNDER

TJ

Product and data. Builds the thing, reviews every release on a real device before it ships, and decides what does not get built.

Self funded. No investor telling us to sell placement.

Three ways in, in order of usefulness.

Apply

songcry.app/r/deck

Every application is reviewed by a person.
Your signup opens your city.

Download it and look

songcry.app/r/deckapp

Free. See the feed before you decide anything.

Or just ask

Reply to whoever sent you this

If you want the longer version, or you have a question we did not answer here.

Level the playing field for independent artists. Give music back its geography.